

SEATTLE UNIVERSITY
COLLEGE OF EDUCATION
DEPARTMENT OF K-12 TEACHING, LEARNING AND SOCIAL JUSTICE

TEACHER EDUCATION MISSION

Teacher education at Seattle University prepares social justice educators who actively strive for educational equity in partnership with students, families, and communities furthest from justice, through a lifelong process of critical reflection and action rooted in anti-racist and humanizing pedagogies.

[TEED 5113-02: Culturally and Linguistically Responsive Teaching-I]
[FALL QUARTER 2026]

Instructor Information

Instructor: Kerry Soo Von Esch, PhD
Email: voneschk@seattleu.edu
Office phone: 206-296-5771
Office hours: By appointment – please email Dr. Von Esch to schedule.

Course Information

Credits: 3
Location: LOY 302
First Session: 9/03/2026
Last Session: 9/28/2026

**Please allow 24 hours for me to return your email or phone call if it is during the week or 48 hours if it is over the weekend.*

**Please also remember that university correspondences are professional correspondences. Therefore, please follow the following guidelines for email and messaging communication:*

- Provide clear “subject” (e.g. TEED 5113, CLRT-I Assignment)
- Start with proper greeting and closing
  - e.g. “Dear Professor Von Esch...” or “Dear Dr. Von Esch”*
  - and e.g. “Sincerely, [your first and/or last name]” or “See you in class next week, [first name]”*
- Edit for grammar, spelling, and clarity (avoid colloquialisms “my bad”)
- Avoid writing as though texting (no “ill b l8 4ur clss”)

COURSE DESCRIPTION & RATIONALE

This class is based on the assumption that to be truly culturally sustaining and linguistically responsive educators, we need to develop, deepen, and utilize a combination of all our dispositions, knowledge, and skills to enable us to facilitate the learning of culturally and linguistically diverse (CLD) students. We will be exploring multiple, interrelated factors that shape or influence the teaching and learning of CLD students, including the different, often conflicting, political, historical, and social contexts concerning the education of racially, culturally, and linguistically diverse students.

We will ground our work with culturally and linguistically sustaining instruction in constructivist views of learning where CLD students are positioned as capable learners and sense makers, and where their ways of speaking and thinking are considered resources for further development rather than problems to be remedied. In this approach, we promote critical thinking, problem-solving, collaboration, and the engagement of multiple perspectives.

We will connect these understandings to what it means to craft our teaching in culturally sustaining and linguistically responsive ways, building and deepening our foundation for working with CLD students and setting up for more instructional and methodological work next quarter.

***Please note that I reserve the right to change anything in the syllabus as the course progresses in order to facilitate the learning and well-being of the students.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

---

By the end of this course, you will be able to:

1. Explain the roles of culture, language, and social context in how students learn.
2. Define and explain teaching culturally and linguistically diverse students as political, multidimensional, and connecting to families and communities, and building community.
3. Reflect on and deepen understanding of yourself as a sociocultural being, engaged in the process of becoming a transformational agent for justice who aims to help change the status quo for the common good in education.
4. Explain and synthesize foundational principles of culturally sustaining and linguistically responsive pedagogy, and use them to analyze the teaching and learning of culturally and linguistically diverse students.
5. Explain basic principles of second language learning and how they are addressed in linguistically responsive teaching.
6. Explain language variation, language register, linguistic repertoires, relationships between language, culture, and learning, and how all of these concepts are central to the teaching and learning of culturally and linguistically diverse students.

RELEVANT PROGRAM COMPETENCIES

---

This course supports the development of the following competencies:

Strand 1: Social Justice Identity

Essential Question: How will you develop your identity as an anti-racist, humanizing teacher working for social justice?

- 1.1 TCs are committed to examining their own histories, identities, biases, assumptions and their own tensions with racism and oppressions.
- 1.2 TCs value learning as a lifelong process in becoming an anti-racist educator.
- 1.3 TCs recognize students' intersecting identities and critically reflect on how biases, perceptions, expectations and actions in classrooms and schools affect their learning opportunities.
- 1.5 TCs understand how historical and institutional structures create and maintain racial and other inequities and oppressions in education.

Strand 2: Authentic Partnerships

Essential Question: How will you partner with families, communities, and school personnel to cultivate learning opportunities in pursuit of educating the whole person?

- 2.1 TCs are committed to listening to and honoring the voices of persons who are from communities furthest from justice, including indigenous communities.
- 2.2 TCs value the partnerships with families, communities, and other school personnel as a necessity in educating the whole person.

Strand 3: Learning Environment

Essential Question: How will you facilitate an inclusive and culturally sustaining learning community in your classroom that fosters a sense of belonging and agency for each student?

- 3.1 TCs believe that “all learners can achieve at high levels and persist in helping each learner reach their full potential.” (INTASC, 2(I))
- 3.2. TCs create classroom communities where students' identities, cultures and languages are valuable resources for learning.

Strand 4: Planning, Instruction & Assessment

Essential Question: How will you design and enact relevant and meaningful instruction and assessment to develop students' identities, knowledge, understandings, skills, and dispositions to bring creativity and innovation to the world's most pressing issues?

- 4.4 TCs apply research-based theories of learning and development to design and enact equitable instruction.
- 4.10 TCs seek out feedback and engage in ongoing critical reflection to strengthen their practice.

COURSE INSTRUCTIONAL METHODS

Education research shows that your learning is greatest when you are actively involved in making sense of new concepts (“constructing knowledge”) and when you do this in community with other students. This model is technically called “social constructivism,” and is closely aligned with the Jesuit teaching tradition (Ignatian pedagogy). We will use this model throughout the course, so you can expect to:

- be engaged in plenty of classroom activities to build on the preparation materials you have completed for each class
- work in small groups during class and for those groups to change on a regular basis
- ask your instructor for clarifications, rather than expecting lectures.

If you find that you haven’t managed to complete an assigned reading/podcast/video before class, you will likely find that class session frustrating, since we will build on and apply the material each time (including trouble-shooting the issues you found most perplexing), but class will not involve regurgitating the content of the material. I hope you find this an engaging and enjoyable approach to learning.

RESPONSIBILITIES TO OUR LEARNING COMMUNITY:

Our class is a learning community, requiring effort on the part of all involved. Please be mindful of the obligations of each of us to generate and sustain opportunities to learn. I expect you to help us build a productive learning community in our class in the following ways:

- Be present. Taking individual circumstances into account, you are expected to attend every class session punctually and completely. If you need to miss a session, arrive late, or leave early, please talk with me about your circumstances so that we can problem solve together, if needed, and make a plan for how you can make up the content and activities that you missed. Your grade will be lowered accordingly if you miss classes or portions of classes or if you consistently arrive late or leave early without notification. Please review the complete MIT program attendance policy in the MIT Field Handbook.

Being present mentally also requires that you turn off your email and cell-phone ringers during class sessions, (including texting), and that you not check social networking sites, update your status on Facebook, surf the internet, etc. during our class sessions. Please tell me if you must take a call or respond to a text during class.

- Be prepared. As mentioned above, our class sessions will be devoted to discussion and activities that help us synthesize or go deeper with what we have read, watched, or experienced. It is imperative, then, to complete all readings and assignments before class, and come prepared to apply, discuss, and raise questions about what you have read or produced and to participate in class activities. If you come to class unprepared, this will impact your learning.
- Participate actively. Your full and active participation are crucial for your own and your colleagues’ learning. Participation includes contributing to large and small-group discussions and activities, asking questions, listening, and responding thoughtfully to colleagues, respectfully challenging your and others’ assumptions, and using course readings and experiences to support your responses and opinions. Take responsibility for asking instructors if you need additional information or support. Active participation also requires that you take notes in class, and review and add to your class notes after each session. This will support you to unpack ideas and develop deep understanding, laying a strong foundation on which you can build in upcoming activities.

- Be generous. Be respectful. Be direct. Help your colleagues learn and succeed. If you have concerns, talk directly with those involved; try to resolve issues in a timely and constructive manner. If others share concerns with you, listen with an open mind and generous heart. It is important to learn to talk respectfully across difference.

ASSIGNMENTS AND (UN)GRADING

---

OVERVIEW OF ASSIGNMENTS

| ASSIGNMENT                                            | RELEVANT PROGRAM COMPETENCIES | DUE DATE                |
|-------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------|-------------------------|
| Student Participation, Preparation, and In-Class Work | All listed in this syllabus   | Ongoing(9/3 – 9/29) |
| Focal CLD Student Profile (Field Placement)           | All listed in this syllabus   | 9/14, 9:00am            |
| Lotería Cards                                         | All listed in this syllabus   | 9/28, 9:00am            |
| CLRT-I Portfolio                                      | All listed in this syllabus   | 10/11, 11:59pm          |
| Program Synthesis Assessment (Oral Final)             | All listed in this syllabus   | TBD                     |

MY APPROACH TO (UN)GRADING

Before delving into assignments, I will say a word about my approach to grading and assessment in this course. My main concern in this course is that you have learned foundational skills, knowledge, and dispositions that you will need to build on for the methodological work we will be doing later in the program. To that end, this course will utilize an ungrading approach (Blum, 2020), in which I prioritize ongoing, qualitative feedback as opposed to quantitative assessment. You will get a final grade in TEED 5113- Culturally and Linguistically Responsive Teaching-I, but I will not be giving you points or letter grades on individual assignments. Rather, you will receive feedback from and engage in dialogue with both myself and your peers, mostly during class. Likewise, you will be reflecting carefully on your own work throughout the quarter. The intention here is to help you focus on developing your knowledge, skills, and dispositions as a culturally and linguistically responsive educator, as opposed to focusing on getting a “good grade.”

Most of the assignments will be completed during class for which you will receive real-time feedback from either myself (your instructor) or your peers through questioning, discussions, and in-class interactions. The exceptions are the CLRT-I Final Portfolio. This is a summative assessment, and you will receive feedback from myself according to the Portfolio’s success criteria. If the Portfolio does not meet the success criteria, you would ideally be able to revise and resubmit as many times as needed. However, due to the pace of the MIT program and as time in the quarter is very limited, I will accept only one revision. When resubmitting an assignment, complete the following tasks: a) upload revised assignment to Canvas, b) address specific points in the instructor's comments, and c) use a different color font to highlight the changes you have made. The resubmission is due one week after the assignment was returned unless an alternative timeline has been agreed to. The ultimate goal is to ensure you have a strong foundation in culturally and linguistically responsive teaching on which to build your instructional skills.

At the end of the quarter, you will: (1) complete a self-assessment of your learning in the course; and (2) propose a grade for your success in the course with a clear rationale and evidence of your learning.

*Please note: I reserve the right to change the final grade where appropriate.

Descriptive criteria for final grades

|   |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
|---|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| A | Attendance/Engagement <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Attends all classes except in the case of extreme health or family emergencies. Communicates clearly about absences and took responsibility by making up any missed work.</li> <li>• Contributes actively, productively and respectfully to the learning community, including being timely, present, engaged, and prepared.</li> <li>• Makes consistently thoughtful and substantive contributions to small and large group discussions in class rooted in principles of culturally and linguistically responsive teaching and learning.</li> </ul> Quality/Learning <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Demonstrates a strong and deep understanding of all concepts related to the teaching and learning of culturally and linguistically diverse (CLD) students through discussions, in-class activities, and written assignments.</li> <li>• Successfully substantiates claims and understandings of CLD student learning and teaching rooted in research and principles of culturally and linguistically responsive teaching.</li> <li>• Shows consistent evidence of growth, applying feedback to strengthen work</li> <li>• Brings a student- and justice-oriented stance, creativity and insight into the teaching and learning of CLD students to discussions, in-class activities, and written assignments.</li> <li>• Completes all assignments with thoughtfulness and care.</li> </ul> |
|   | Attendance/Engagement                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |

|                           |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
|---------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| B                         | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Attended 4/6 (or 80% of) classes, took initiative to schedule a meeting with the instructor about your absence, and made-up work.</li> <li>• Contributes productively to the learning community, with some issues being timely, present, engaged, respectful, and/or prepared.</li> <li>• Makes contributions to small and large group discussions in class mostly rooted in principles of culturally and linguistically responsive teaching and learning.</li> </ul> Quality/Learning <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Demonstrates an adequate, yet inconsistent level of understanding of concepts related to the teaching and learning of culturally and linguistically diverse (CLD) students through discussions, in-class activities, and written assignments.</li> <li>• Mostly supports claims and understandings of CLD student learning and teaching with research and principles of culturally and linguistically responsive teaching. These supported claims and understandings may not show a full or deep understanding of some of research or principles covered in the course.</li> <li>• Shows evidence of growth, but inconsistently applies feedback to work</li> <li>• Shows some evidence of bringing a justice-oriented stance, creativity and insight into the teaching and learning of CLD students to discussions, in-class activities, and written assignments.</li> <li>• Completes most assignments with thoughtfulness and/or care.</li> </ul> |
| Not ready to move forward | Attendance/Engagement <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Attended 3/5 or less classes (or 60% of) classes, took initiative to schedule a meeting with the instructor about your absence, and made-up work.</li> <li>• Does not contribute productively to the learning community, having issues with timeliness, presence, engagement, respect, and preparedness.</li> <li>• Makes little to no contributions to small and large group discussions in class. Contributions are often not related to principles of culturally and linguistically responsive teaching.</li> </ul> Quality/Learning <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Shows an unsatisfactory level of understanding of concepts related to the teaching and learning of culturally and linguistically diverse (CLD) students through discussions, in-class activities, and written assignments.</li> <li>• Unsuccessfully defends claims and understandings of CLD student learning and teaching with little to no reference to research and principles of culturally and linguistically responsive teaching.</li> <li>• Shows no evidence of growth, is not receptive to, nor applies feedback to strengthen work.</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |

- |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Shows evidence of a deficit mindset and/or does not center CLD students in understandings of the teaching and learning of CLD students.</li> <li>• Assignments are missing or completed with little thoughtfulness or care.</li> </ul> |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|

Consistent with MIT Policy, you must earn the equivalent of at least a B grade (3.0) in order to pass our course. The final grades you earn will be according to the University grading system: A (3.85-4.0), A- (3.5-3.84), B+ (3.15-3.49), B (2.85-3.14), B- (2.5-2.84). Any grade below a B- will be considered unsatisfactory. [Any grade of B- or below on the above assignments can be resubmitted once.]

REQUIRED READINGS – all readings can be found on our course Canvas page or online

- Gay, G. (2022). Chapter 2: Pedagogical potential of cultural responsiveness. In Author, Culturally responsive teaching: Theory, Research, and Practice (3rd edition) (pp. 28-33; 36-46). Teachers College Press.
- Gay, G. (2022). Chapter 3: The power of culturally responsive caring. In Author, Culturally responsive teaching: Theory, Research, and Practice (3rd edition) (pp. 57-69;80-88). New York: Teachers College Press.
- Gibbons, P. (2015). Chapter 1: Scaffolding language and learning. In Author, Scaffolding language, scaffolding learning: Teaching second language learners in the mainstream classroom (2nd edition) (pp. 1 – 19). Heinemann.
- Nieto, S. (2010). Chapter 1: Learning, the social context, and multicultural education. In Author, The light in their eyes: Creating multicultural learning communities (pp. 33- 49). Teachers College Press.
- Nieto, S., & Bode, P. (2020). Chapter 2: Defining multicultural education for school reform. Affirming diversity: The sociopolitical context of multicultural education (7th ed.) (pp. 32-45). Pearson.
- Nieto, S., & Bode, P. (2020). Chapter 5: Culture, identity, and learning. Affirming diversity: The sociopolitical context of multicultural education (7th ed.) (pp. 137-151). Pearson.
- Peregoy, S.F. & Boyle, O.F. (2022). Chapter 2: Language and Language Acquisition. Reading, Writing and Learning in ESL: A Resource Book for Teaching K-12 English Learners (8th edition) (pp. 40-58; 61-66). Allyn & Bacon.
- Yosso, T.J. (2005). Whose culture has capital? A critical race theory discussion of community cultural wealth. Race Ethnicity and Education, 8(1), 77-81.

REQUIREMENTS

1. COVID Safety Measures (updated as of March 12, 2022)

- Faculty and students are encouraged to mask indoors but are not required to do so.
- Please be supportive of and compassionate to one another as we each continue to navigate COVID-19 post-pandemic.
- Consistent with the State of Washington's guidance, the lifting of SU's face covering requirement will apply to both vaccinated and unvaccinated members of the community.
- As required by the State of Washington, face coverings must still be worn in certain settings, including health care.
- If you are symptomatic or have been exposed to COVID, please follow the guidelines on the SU COVID's website.
- All faculty, staff, and students must remain up to date with vaccinations and register booster shots.
- SU reserves the right to change the delivery of instruction for courses without prior notice due to COVID-19 or other events.
- Refer to the COVID Response website for all up-to-date policies and guidelines.

2. Attendance and Participation:

The Master in Teaching program is a four-quarter professional preparation program; attendance, being prepared, and participation are foundational for succeeding in the program and meeting program and certification requirements. Courses are designed as learning laboratories that provide you with hands-on and minds-on classroom-based experiences directly applicable to becoming a teacher. To that end, we would like to see all of you actively participating in class, in small- and large-group settings, as well as in any activities or discussions on Canvas.

In response to the pandemic, MIT instructors have provided students with medical issues or who had to quarantine due to COVID exposure with the option of connecting to in-person class sessions via zoom. This practice has led to significant disruptions for instructors and for students attending in person. Therefore, our policy for Fall Quarter is as follows: if you have a medical or family emergency, if you have to quarantine due to a COVID exposure, or if inclement weather prohibits your getting to campus, you should contact your instructor as soon as possible. Instructors have the discretion to either connect you to the class session via zoom or to provide you with an asynchronous make-up task. Make-up work will be required for all missed classes; it is your responsibility to reach out to instructors to discuss the task. If you miss a substantial number of class sessions and are not able to make up the work in an acceptable and timely manner, your learning and thus preparation for full-time student teaching will be negatively impacted. Should a situation arise that impedes your progress, we will work with you to make a reasonable plan to progress in the program.

3. Demonstrate Commitment to the Expectations of the Profession:

Teacher candidates demonstrate the expectations and requirements of the teaching profession by participating in class and field settings, completing assignments and responsibilities on time, demonstrating openness to new ideas, being willing to accept constructive feedback and using that feedback to improve performance, taking initiative, using good judgment, demonstrating flexibility, and displaying a commitment to learning as a life-long endeavor. When in the field, the expectation is that Seattle U teacher candidates abide by the school's policies and seek both to learn and to support the teacher(s), students, and school community. Regarding technology, whether we are in person or remote, we'll likely have computers open and that means that millions of distractions are at our fingertips. We ask that you refrain from web-surfing, emailing, and engaging in text messaging during class. Let's support one another to focus on learning and make good use of our time.

---

GENERAL COURSE RESOURCES AND UNIVERSITY POLICIES

Our goal is to create a learning environment in which you can be successful and feel supported. We will work hard to create and improve the learning environment throughout the quarter based on my own observations of the course and your feedback on what would help you learn more. In return, we ask and encourage you to make the most of this learning opportunity. In the event we need to use a remote learning format, you may find that some of your previously successful strategies in face-to-face and on-campus settings are less suited to this unexpected environment. We are keen to support you in that growth, and plan to build in opportunities for us all to share new strategies with one another either in scheduled class time or via a Zoom chat. You can also check the advice posted on the SU Orientation to Distance Learning site at <https://seattleu.instructure.com/courses/1563070/pages/study-habits>.

Academic integrity tutorial

<https://www.seattleu.edu/academic-integrity/resources-for-students/>

Policy on the use of generative artificial intelligence tools for this course:

You are discouraged from using AI for this course because course assignments tap into both your own ideas and the specific contexts in which you will be teaching. Some assignments ask for your opinion, personal experiences, or insights and of course that cannot be generated by a machine. In other words, we do not want to engage in “cognitive outsourcing” but rather for you to develop conceptual understanding and habits of mind that will prepare you to be an educator for social justice.

*Please note that AI is a dynamic and rapidly changing tool, and as a result our policies are subject to change. Learning to use AI responsibly and ethically is an important skill in today's society, and one you will need to consider as you teach your future students.

Support for Students with Disabilities

Seattle University values diverse types of learners and is committed to ensuring that each student is afforded an equal opportunity to participate in learning experiences. For disability and other learning-related needs and accommodations that you have already arranged via Disability Services, please communicate with me during the first week of class through email or Zoom. Should concerns arise at any point in the quarter, please let me know as soon as possible.

If you have, or think you may have, a disability (including an “invisible disability” such as a learning disability, a chronic health problem, or a mental health condition) that interferes with your performance as a student in this class, but have not yet arranged support services and/or accommodations, We encourage you to do so through Disability Services staff at DS@seattleu.edu or (206) 296-5740. Disability-based adjustments to course expectations can be arranged only through this process. We are committed to working with you, so please do not hesitate to contact me.

Notice on Religious Accommodations

It is the policy of Seattle University to reasonably accommodate students who, due to the observance of religious holidays, expect to be absent or endure a significant hardship during certain days of their academic course or program. Please see, Policy on Religious Accommodations for Students (<https://www.seattleu.edu/media/policies/Policy-on-Religious-Accommodations-for-Students---FINAL.PDF>).

Grading Grievance - Procedure for Challenge Course Grades

This grade grievance policy and procedure defines the policies and outlines the processes that govern in those cases when a student wishes to grieve a final course grade. A copy of this grading grievance policy and procedure document can be found at: <http://www.seattleu.edu/registrar/page.aspx?ID=194>

CLASS SESSIONS & READING ASSIGNMENTS

| Date                                                                                | Topics                                                                                                                                                 | Readings & Assignments (DUE)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Thursday,September3rd9:00am -3:00pm | MorningFrames of ReferenceLearning, Social Context, andEducating Culturally andLinguistically Diverse (CLD)Students | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• (Read) Nieto, Chapter 1: Learning, the social context, and multicultural education, (pp. 33- 49)</li> <li>• (Listen) Serial/New York Times Podcast: Nice White Parents, Episode 1: The Book of Statues, (1 hour 2 minutes)</li> </ul> |
|                                                                                     | Afternoon“Seeing the CLD Student”Course Overview & Syllabus                                                                     | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• (Read) Flores, Monolingual White children (pp. 1-2)</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                      |

| Date                                                                                  | Topics                                                                                                           | Readings & Assignments (DUE)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Monday,September14th9:00am –3:00pm    | MorningCulture, Language, andSchoolingCommunities of CulturalWealth               | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• (Read) Nieto &amp; Bode, Chapter 5: Culture, Identity, and Learning, (pp. 137-151).</li> <li>• (Read) Yosso, Whose culture has capital? A critical race theory discussion of community cultural wealth, (p. 77 beginning with "Traditional Bourdieuean cultural capital theory...." to p. 81 ending before the "Discussion")</li> </ul> Assignment DUE: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Focal CLD Student Profile (Field Placement)</li> </ul> |
|                                                                                       | AfternoonAsset-Based Pedagogy:Positioning Students asKnowers                              |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Wednesday,September16th9:00am –3:00pm | MorningCulturally Sustaining Pedagogy/ Critical Pedagogy                                      | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• (Read, jigsaw) Gay, Chapter 2: Pedagogical Potential of Cultural Responsiveness, (pp. 29-33; 36-46)</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
|                                                                                       | AfternoonCulturally Responsive Caring inthe Classroom                                         | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• (Read) Gay, Chapter 3: The Power of Culturally Responsive Caring, (pp. 57-69; 80-88)</li> </ul> Assignment: Work on lotería cards.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Monday,September21st9:00am –3:00pm    | MorningImmigrant Adaptation & SocialContexts for Educating EmergentBilingual Students     |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
|                                                                                       | AfternoonLanguage & CultureSecond Language LearningBilingual Language Development | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• (Read) Perego &amp; Boyle, Chapter 2: Language &amp; Language Acquisition, Second Language Acquisition Theories, (pp. 45-58; 61-66, stop before section "Teacher Expectations and Learner Errors")</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |

|                                                                                       |                                                                                                 | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• (Listen) Lost in Translation: The Power of Language To Shape How We View the World (35 minutes 25 seconds)</li> </ul> Assignment: Work on lotería cards.                    |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Date                                                                                  | Topics                                                                                          | Readings & Assignments (DUE)                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Wednesday,September23rd9:00am –3:00pm | MorningLanguage Variation & Translanguaging(Schooling) Language Register | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• (Read) Callaway, How Does One Brain Speak Two Languages? (New York Times article)</li> </ul>                                                                                     |
|                                                                                       | AfternoonLinguistically Responsive Pedagogy                                      | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• (Read) Gibbons, Chapter 1: Scaffolding language and learning (pp. 1-19)</li> </ul> Assignment: Work on lotería cards.                                                       |
| Monday,September28th9:00am –3:00pm    | MorningTeaching for Social Justice                                               | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• (Read) Nieto &amp; Bode, A definition of multicultural education, (pp. 32-45).</li> </ul> Assignment DUE: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Lotería Cards</li> </ul> |
|                                                                                       | AfternoonCourse Wrap-Up                                                          |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |

COURSE ASSIGNMENTS

Name of Assignment: Focal CLD Student Profile (Field Placement)
 Due Date: Monday, September 14th, 9:00am

Assignment Objective(s): To demonstrate progress toward the following course learning objectives:

- Demonstrate knowledge, dispositions, and skills of cultural competency in education.
- Define and explain teaching culturally and linguistically diverse students as political, multidimensional, and connecting to families and communities, and building community.
- Explain and synthesize foundational principles of culturally sustaining and linguistically responsive pedagogy, and use them to analyze the teaching and learning of culturally and linguistically diverse students.

- Explain basic principles of second language learning and how they are addressed in linguistically responsive teaching.

Rationale for the Assignment:

This assignment is intended to: (1) support your skills in building relationships with multilingual learners (MLLs); and (2) build your observational and analytic skills regarding MLLs and their teaching and learning.

Description of the Assignment:

You will choose 1 CLD student from your school placement and gather as much information as you can about that student, their family and communities, their learning opportunities in their school and classroom, and how they engage with the teacher, their peers, and in their learning environment.

You will then bring what you learned to class where we will analyze the instructional, classroom, and school environments in which your focal student engages, and make connections to broader social, economic, and/or political factors that may influence your student's learning opportunities.

*Specific details for this assignment are given on our class Canvas site.

Criteria for Evaluation

*To be given in class.

SUBMISSION INFORMATION (DUE Monday, September 14th)

**Please upload to Canvas.

Name of Assignment: Loteria Cards
Due Date: Monday, September 28th, 9:00am

Assignment Objective(s): To demonstrate progress towards learning of course learning objectives:

- Demonstrate knowledge, dispositions, and skills of cultural competency in education.
- Define and explain teaching culturally and linguistically diverse students as political, multidimensional, and connecting to families and communities, and building community.
- Explain and synthesize foundational principles of culturally sustaining and linguistically responsive pedagogy, and use them to analyze the teaching and learning of culturally and linguistically diverse students.
- Explain basic principles of second language learning and how they are addressed in linguistically responsive teaching.
- Explain language variation, language register, linguistic repertoires, relationships between language, culture, and learning, and how all of these concepts are central to the teaching and learning of culturally and linguistically diverse students.

Rationale for the Assignment:

This assignment is intended to demonstrate your knowledge and understanding of important concepts in the teaching and learning of CLD students. By constructing these cards, you are making an original artifact that allows for an alternative form of representing ideas. The development of visual skills is even more important in the context of multilingual and multicultural environments. Developing the ability to represent ideas visually is important and a key part of expanding your intellectual and teaching repertoire.

The lotería cards also serve as an alternative form of assessment, different from reading logs, essays, and standardized tests. They allow a window into your mind— an alternative way of seeing how you are thinking about key concepts in the class. The visual format also allows us to see multiple people's ways of thinking at once—quite different from the confines of verbal speech where typically only one person can talk at a time in a discussion.

Description of the Assignment:

In this course we will have the opportunity to integrate arts through our adapted version of Lotería cards. Taken from a Mexican children's game (which is basically like visual bingo, where one draws picture cards instead of numbers), you will construct visual representations of key course concepts. Rather than relying entirely on text to get your message across, you will be asked to construct images on 3 x 5 index cards. On the back of the card, please include a short description of what your image represents. You can also include a quote if you wish, but that is not a substitute for your own words. We will be using these lotería cards as a way to make sense of what we are learning and as an alternative assessment of understanding of key course concepts. More details can be found on the CLRT-I Canvas site and will be given in class.

Criteria for Evaluation

*To be given in class.

SUBMISSION INFORMATION (DUE Monday, September 28th, 9:00am)

**Please also upload photos of your Lotería cards to Canvas.

Name of Assignment: CLRT-I Portfolio
Due Date: Sunday, October 11th, 11:59pm

Assignment Objective(s): To demonstrate learning of and synthesis of course learning objectives:

- Demonstrate knowledge, dispositions, and skills of cultural competency in education.
- Define and explain teaching culturally and linguistically diverse students as political, multidimensional, and connecting to families and communities, and building community.
- Reflect on and deepen understanding of yourself as a sociocultural being, engaged in the process of becoming a transformational agent for justice who aims to help change the status quo for the common good in education.
- Explain and synthesize foundational principles of culturally sustaining and linguistically responsive pedagogy, and use them to analyze the teaching and learning of culturally and linguistically diverse students.

- Explain basic principles of second language learning and how they are addressed in linguistically responsive teaching.
- Explain language variation, language register, linguistic repertoires, relationships between language, culture, and learning, and how all of these concepts are central to the teaching and learning of culturally and linguistically diverse students.

Rationale for the Assignment:

This assignment is intended to: (1) demonstrate your growth and learning towards the course learning objectives; and (2) reflect upon on your learning and progress towards becoming a culturally and linguistically responsive educator. Learning in this course is foundational to the methods work we will do in CLRT-II.

Description of the Assignment:

You will create a portfolio of work done throughout the course that demonstrates your progress and learning towards the course objectives and your own development as a culturally and linguistically responsive educator.

Your portfolio will consist of:

- A. Portfolio Artifacts – 5-7 portfolio artifacts (e.g. class assignments, class activities, discussions, etc.) that show evidence of your learning towards each of the course learning outcomes.
- B. Captions for each artifact – each artifact should be accompanied by a short paragraph that explains:
  - What course learning outcome this artifact addresses
  - What you learned and why this is important in the teaching and learning of culturally and linguistically diverse students. *Please remember to cite your sources (i.e. readings, videos, etc.).
  - What the artifact shows about your learning and why. (Please note, you do not need to address all of the questions below.)
    - Does this artifact show a point of particularly powerful learning for you? Why?
    - Is this artifact an example of learning where you grew in skill, knowledge, dispositions, or any combination of the above? In what ways?
    - Does this artifact show learning that challenged you? How?
- C. Grade Justification/Rationale – write one paragraph on a separate page your proposed grade for the course along with your justification/rationale for that grade. Please make sure you address all descriptive criteria in the course rubric. You may use your CLRT-I Portfolio as part of your justification/rationale, but not as the only justification/rationale.

Criteria for Evaluation

*To be given in class.

SUBMISSION INFORMATION (DUE Sunday, October 11th)**Please upload to Canvas.